DOUBLE HEADER WITH E & F

By LOTTE NETZEL

The academy held special training sessions at Leashheff and Atlem this week to keep all cadets in top form.

The First exercise took place at night with rival class F, which we felt confident going into until Nichol softly called our attention towards the tanks. It was harder to spot distant enemies, but our Lancers and Shocktroopers made a huge contribution by mowing down every unit they encountered.

The Second exercise also had its share of hardships, and this time it was the fog that forced many missed shots from middle to long range. Luckily, Lavina set a lamp on top of her tank to give us the advantage we needed to defeat class E in the mist.

Braxy reported that there will be similar exercises in the future, warning us not to be overconfident just because we were lucky.

Download Missions "Exercise vs Class E" and "Exercise vs Class F" are add-on content available at the PlayStation®Store. Players must either have the game disc or the full game data of Valkyria Chronicles™ II to play this content.

Keeping the Leader Active

By ZERI

It is elementary that use of Command Points (CP) will directly impact the squad's success on the field. I don't particularly think our chair excels on CP management, but at least he is trying to lead us by staying active on the field. When a leader is positioned on the field, the squad will automatically receive one additional CP per turn, which may allow us to overtake a camp, save wounded allies, and execute other critical tasks before the enemies make their move.
